Introduction

By Katherine Harloe and Amara Thornton

This Directory is machine generated, meaning it has been compiled by converting specific Linked Open Data (LOD) statements in entries in the Beyond Notability database into text that reads pretty much like a natural language. As we explain further in Chapter 1 of Recovering Women's Work, LOD statements are made up of triples: subject / predicate / object. A unique Q number is assigned for subjects and objects, and a unique P number is assigned for predicates. Statements can contain qualifiers for more specific information such as dates or free-text notes.

For example, Annie Abram is a subject with a unique Q number in our database (Q536). She was educated at (a predicate) Hampstead Extension Centre (an object) in 1893 (a qualifier).

This Directory contains entries for all 915 women in the Beyond Notability database, listed alphabetically by surname, but it does not reproduce all the information we have gathered on these women. Each woman's Q number is given in parentheses next to her name, together with the total number of statements in her database entry. The higher the number of statements, the richer the information contained in the database beyond that reproduced in this Directory.

Every woman's entry in our database includes three or four basic statements: specifically, those using the predicates instance of (to identify that the entry is for a human), assigned gender (to identify that the human has been assigned the gender of woman), family name at birth and, if applicable, married name, in addition to one activity or appearance in our sources. Therefore, if the number of statements listed next to a woman's name in the Directory is five or fewer, this means that the database contains only a basic level of historical information about her. Where we have no other datable information for a woman, the 'earliest appearance' we have identified for that woman will be given (i.e. the earliest time she occurs in a datable source). In some cases, the 'earliest appearance' is the woman's only appearance in the sources we have researched for the project.

Beyond these basic statements, we have chosen to include in the Directory a set of further statements describing activities that many women in our dataset pursued. The work-related activities we have included are:

- Education (our predicate educated at)
- Degree/certificate awards (degree awarded)
- Memberships and fellowships (member of and fellow of)
- Periodical publications (work(s) published in)
- Collaborations (collaborated with)
- Correspondence between women (corresponded with)
- Donations to cultural institutions (donor to)

- Nuclear family relations between women (mother and sibling)

A particular challenge for generating the Directory information has been dates, since the database contains three different kinds of temporal information (start dates, end dates, and points in time 'within which'). To create a uniform statement applicable to all these types of date the Directory lists approximate ('circa') dates for all tertiary educational activity; where possible, this is the start date as noted in our database. . Because many women in our database engaged in tertiary education activity for longer than the three to four years that has been traditional in the past half-century, we have settled on the start date as the best date to attach to this activity.

We cannot guarantee that there are no duplicate women in our database (and therefore in the Directory), but we have done our best to exclude them. The forename and surname information given in this Directory have developed over the course of a project, but surnames listed broadly correspond to the surname that we first came across in our research (e. g. “Mrs Charles Welby”). In many cases we had to do extensive research to attempt to recover full forenames. Where we succeeded, we adjusted name data to give forename(s) plus surname as the ‘canonical name’ in our database. Any alternative names we have come across are noted in the database at the top of each entry under “Also known as”.

As well as a standalone resource, the Directory is intended as an entry point for exploring our data. While it presents a handy, alphabetical overview of all the women in the Beyond Notability database, it can only ever be a snapshot, and a partial one at that. In many cases, interested readers will find further information on women’s lives and activities in the database, including on place(s) of residence, speaking engagements, collecting activities, attendance at conferences, contributions to exhibitions, work on archaeological excavations, service on committees, war work, suffrage activities, positions held (e. g. Cataloguer, freelance Lecturer), and other related work for which women were acknowledged.

Sharon Howard discusses the technical aspects of creating the Directory further in her ‘Data Experiments’ blog post on ‘Making a Directory of Women’: https://beyond-notability.github.io/bn_notes/notes/narratives-from-data.html
